HEALTHIEST ONE IN THE FAMILY

No Sign Of Dropsy And Kidney Trouble
Since Taking "FRUIT-A-LIVES"

HATTIE WARREN
Port Robinson, July 8th, 1915.

"We have used 'Fruit-a-lives' in our house for over three years and have always found them a good medicine. Our little girl, Hattie, was troubled with Kidney Disease. The Doctor said she was threatened with Dropsy. Her limbs and body were all swollen and we began to think she could not live. Finally, we decided to try 'Fruit-a-lives'. She began to show improvement after we had given her a few tablets. In a short time, the swelling had all gone down and her flesh began to look more natural. Now she is the healthiest one in the family and has no signs of the old ailment. We can not say too much for 'Fruit-a-lives' and would never be without them."

How TO CAN FISH FOR HOME USE.—As a measure of economy in the present period of high prices the government bureau of fisheries urges housewives, particularly those living near streams and lakes or the seashore, to preserve fish for home consumption.

Fish can be bought when they are cheap, during times of plenty, and held for use in the winter, when prices are high. In many cases waste fishes, which because of prejudice or ignorance are not placed on the market, may be bought for a low price and sometimes obtained from fishermen for the asking. Practically all fishes are edible, and purchasers should not be deterred from buying them on account of their unattractive appearance. Some of the ugliest are among the best.

Here is a good method of canning.

When using coarse scaled, thick skinned fishes cut off the fins or make an incision on each side of the fin and pull it out.

Make an incision through the skin along the back, another along the belly and connect these by a third encircling the body just behind the head. Impale the head on a hook or sharpened nail driven through a plank, take hold of the skin at the angle of the two incisions at the back of the head and remove it by pulling toward the tail. Thin skinned fishes, like herring and alewives, should be scaled, not skinned.

Cut off the head, remove the intestines and other organs and take out the backbone by running a cut with a sharp knife on each side inside of the body cavity. Wash thoroughly, taking particular care to remove the blood along the back.

Cut the fish into strips to fit the length of the jars to be used and rub with dry salt, using a level tablespoonful to each pint jar of fish. Fill the jars with the pieces packed as tightly as possible, put on the rubber rings and place the caps on the jars loosely, so that the steam can escape. Put no water in the jars. Cook in a pressure cooker for one and one-half hours after steam pressure registers fifteen pounds or the temperature 250 degrees. Tighten the caps of the jars and permit cooling.

The Yosemite falls drop 1,430 feet, a height equal to nine Niagara's put, one on top of the other.

Treatment of Children

Who Have Prickly Heat

Grown folks sometimes forget just how tormenting prickly heat may be, but it takes very little to remind us. The delicate skin of babies and little children is greatly irritated by the free perspiration of hot weather, and fine, red pimples appear, sometimes covering a large surface. The itching is tormenting and often upsets a nervous child to a marked extent. Flannel underclothing is particularly irritating; put muslin or linen next to the affected parts, and if the weather permits lighten the clothing. Give frequent sponge baths of soda water, using cooking soda and having the water just a little cooler than the body. Allow this to dry without wiping.

Another remedy is to bathe with equal parts of vinegar and water. Dry by patting with a linen cloth, then use a good talcum powder freely. An excellent dusting powder that may be used instead of talcum is made of equal parts of sublimated bismuth and boric acid. Little or no soap should be used in the daily bath, as it tends to cause further irritation. The soda or vinegar bath is especially good just at bedtime, as it quiets and soothes the child for the night. Try to keep him always in the coolest available spot and protect him from flies and mosquitoes.

How to Save Soap.

Here is a method of effecting an economy in regard to old scraps and ends of soap without the necessity for shredding and reaking. Perforate the sides and top of an old mustard tin with a number of small holes in a skewer and a small hammer will quickly produce these and place the soap fragments inside. On washing day just let the tin and its contents lie immersed with the clothes for a few minutes, and on stirring the water you will find that you have a thick, frothy lather ready to wash them in. Drain the tin, and it will be ready for work again next week.

Pickling Beets.

Cook the beets until tender, then left them out into cold water. Let them stand a few minutes, when the skin will slip off easily. While the beets are cooking prepare the vinegar by putting in salt, pepper and sugar to taste and let it boil hot by the time the beets are ready. Drop the beets in the prepared vinegar and let them boil until all are thoroughly heated through, then pack in glass cans and pour the sirup over them and seal tight.

Food Value of Potatoes.

Potatoes (both Irish and sweet) when cooked furnish about as much body food as an equal weight of cooked cereals; they contain less protein and fat, but more mineral substances.

MARRIAGE.

Is not marriage an open question when it is alleged from the beginning of the world that such as are in the institution wish to get out and such as are out wish to get in?—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

I know not which live more in natural lives.

Obedient husbands or commanding wives.

—Benjamin Franklin.
